

KNOX IS CANDIDATE.

H. C. Frick Presents His Name to Leaders for the Vacant Senate Seat.

NO SELECTION IS YET MADE

George T. Oliver of Pittsburgh Withdraws from Contest for Personal Reasons—Miners President Confers With Penrose at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 9.—After another long day of conferences among party leaders, candidates and others on the matter of filling the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of Senator Quay, the matter appears to be as far from a solution as ever. The withdrawal of George T. Oliver of Pittsburgh, who had been practically agreed upon, opened the whole subject and politicians from all over the state who are here taking part and watching the situation are at this time as to who will be selected by State Chairman Bruce Penrose who will name the man.

The candidates in the field are: William Flinn, a Pittsburgh politician; Francis Robbins, president of the Pittsburgh Coal company, one of the largest bituminous coal producers in the country; former Mayor General John P. Egan of Indiana, who is the party nominee in justice of the state supreme court; and Richard R. Quay, son of the late senator. The Pittsburgh delegation which presented the names of Oliver, Flinn and Robbins to Senator Penrose, and General Egan, the Philadelphia leader, who is Penrose's adviser, named Congressman John Dalzel, but it is believed this was done merely as a compliment. The candidates of Robbins looms up strongly principally through a visit paid to Senator Penrose by John Mitchell, president of the mine workers' union. Senator Penrose and Mr. Mitchell were together less than a half hour and after the conference the senator refused to talk. Mr. Mitchell said that he came here in the interests of any candidate.

Much interest was added to the situation when it was announced on H. C. Frick, informally launching Mr. Knox's candidacy, said that he thought the attorney general would be an excellent choice.

Senator Flinn admitted this he had met Mr. Frick and that the latter said that Mr. Knox be considered a candidate. Mr. Flinn further said that another meeting would be held with Senator Penrose and Mr. Flinn, at which the former's name will be taken up.

It is believed that if Mr. Roosevelt is willing, that Mr. Knox resign from the cabinet and will be acceptable to Senator Penrose.

Attorney General Knox's name has been mentioned for the senate place, but his name has not been considered by the senate. It is believed that Mr. Knox was the best of all the candidates, but it is not probable that he will be taken on the senate floor.

It is said on high authority that Senator Penrose will make no selection that is not satisfactory to William Flinn and the Allegheny county Republican organization. There is reported to be considerable opposition among the county leaders to Mr. Flinn and it is no believed here that he will be selected for the vacancy.

LEWIS ETZEL BURIED

Victim of Mistake of Chinese Soldiers Laid to Rest at New Chwang.

MORE FIGHTING IS REPORTED

Rumors from Chinese Sources of Japanese Reverses Credited at St. Petersburg, but London Thinks Oku Needs Time Before Making Attack.

New Chwang, June 9.—Lewis Etzel, correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, was buried here. He was killed 10 miles out at sea by some Chinese soldiers who were searching for prizes. Immediately after realizing the mistake, these men put out to sea and have not been seen since. United States Consul General Miller held an inquest at Shwantai, at which the Chinese General Lu acknowledged that Etzel was killed by his soldiers.

Ernest Brindle of the London Daily Mail, who was along with Etzel when he was shot, testified that their ship was unchallenged by the soldiers and was fired upon in spite of the fact that the foreigners were plainly visible at a distance of less than 100 yards. At least 150 shots were fired at the correspondents' junk, which did not reply. Consul General Miller will forward his report to United States Minister Conger at Peking. While Brindle is uncommunicative regarding the plane which took himself and Etzel on the sea voyage, the Associated Press correspondent has learned that they were attempting to reach Port Arthur. The Russian authorities are doing all in their power to assist the American officials in the matter.

Russians Extend Courtesy.
General Kondratovich placed a steam launch with 25 soldiers under the orders of Consul General Miller and otherwise rendered great aid in recovering the body of Etzel. Consul General Miller has replied to General Kondratovich thanking him heartily for his kindness on behalf of the United States government.

London, June 9.—A dispatch to Reuters' Telegram company from St. Petersburg transmits the following from Liao Yang:

"The Japanese, June 6, according to Chinese reports, made several sustained and stubborn attacks on Port Arthur simultaneously by land and sea. They were repulsed with severe loss. The position of the Japanese in Kwan-Tung is said to be precarious."

A dispatch from St. Petersburg announces that a telegram has been received from Liao Yang saying:

"According to information here a Japanese squadron of nine vessels has been bombarding the coast between Shung-Yu-Cheng, (Huang-Yu-Tung) and Kai-Chow, (Kai-Ping on the west coast of the Liao-Tung peninsula, just below New Chwang, since June 7."

Japanese Cut Communications.
News from Port Arthur, the Liao-Tung peninsula and the Yalu river is cut off from Russian sources by the Japanese, who are between the Russians and the territory mentioned. It is officially asserted that the cables connecting Japan with China are not working, which would prevent Tokyo from having knowledge of events in that section of Manchuria. The interruption of the cable work, however, is more likely to be "official" and due to a censorship at Tokyo.

The sudden interruption of the cable between Korea and Japan is considered significant of the imminence of important operations at Port Arthur, the Japanese having taken precaution, as usual, to cut the only means of communication with the outside world and thus enable her naval and military forces to work with absolute secrecy.

No attention is paid in London to rumors that the storming of the fortress has a ready-made, because it is known that at the battle of Kia-Chow General Oku had exhausted his ammunition and an insufficient period had elapsed during which the stores of ammunition could be renewed and siege guns brought into position. It is considered likely that Admiral Togo is not adverse to Port Arthur waiting its ammunition in complete preparation with the gunboats. This may explain the rumored bombardments while the fleet on the land side may be doing preliminary operations for their purpose during in the Russian forces.

London, June 9.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post telegraphs: "General Stakelberg's Russian brigade, marching in the direction of Port Arthur, suffered a reverse near Wafan-tien and retired to Tash-chiao."

Tate Returns to Washington.

Washington, June 9.—Secretary Tate has returned from Cincinnati, where he took a prominent part in the reception to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. He conferred with the president at regarding the reception of the expositors in this city.

Marine Firemen Go on Strike.

Boston, June 9.—A strike of the marine firemen has been declared and all the firemen employed on steamships in this harbor who belong to the union are expected to quit within three days. A telegram from New York states that a strike of the marine firemen of all lines has been declared.

Akron Capitalist Bankrupt.

Cleveland, June 9.—Isaac Allen of Akron, formerly a resident of the Villa Rica, has been declared bankrupt. His liabilities are estimated at $100,000 and his assets at $25,000.

RUSSIAN PRIEST'S HEROISM.

Father Stepanchukoff's Ticks at His Assistant's Part in a Battle.

Among the wounded from the battle of the Yalu river who arrived recently at Lioyang was Father Stepanchukoff, the priest who led the charge of the Eleventh regiment at the battle of Kihlienchong. Father Stepanchukoff said:

"On the 1st of May I arose at 3 o'clock a. m. knowing that there would be a terrible battle. I was determined to do my duty and to show an example by my death. At 4 o'clock I prayed, then laid down my Bible and stood with the company. As the company moved forward to the charge I blessed the soldiers and went in front of the flag with the cross in my hand, standing by the side of my assistant, Joseph Perch. Bullets were flying all around us."

"I never felt my first wound. The second bullet struck my shoulder, and I fell, losing consciousness. When I opened my eyes I found my assistant leaning over me, with a smile on his face. Seeing that I was alive, he clutched my hand and then took me to the field of battle. It over there was a hero, Joseph Perch is one."

The other wounded who arrived seemed to be in good condition and excited the admiration of the foreign attaches. Many of them asked General Oku to return them to the front. When the surgeon ordered they be sent from the hospital and endeavored to rejoin their regiment.

Low Bell.

What used to be known as "low bell" was formerly a common sport in England and an effective method of capturing all sorts of birds which roost on the ground, from larks to partridges. Boys still sometimes amuse themselves with it in the rural districts of England, and the peasants of Spain and the south of Europe make a business of it. The only necessary apparatus is a large bell, like a cowbell or a dinner bell, and a lantern with a reflector to cast a bright ray of light on the ground. The boy walks the fields during the night, stealthily and keeping the ground in front with the lantern. The noise or the light, or the two combined, have such an effect in dazzling or terrifying the birds that they may be picked up in the hand.

In Praise of May.

When May comes it is a joy to see the white blossoms of the apple trees. The flowers are in full bloom and the air is filled with the sweet fragrance of the blossoms. The birds are singing and the children are playing in the fields. It is a beautiful time of year and we should all enjoy it.

NAPOLEON, As Seen by His Associates

THE LARGENESS OF THE MAN

(Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.)

XIII.
NAPOLÉON'S largeness of mind and soul is set forth in the pages of memorials of the period in the strongest terms, even by those whose attitude is, in the main, far from laudatory. With all his faults, Fouche, the notorious minister of national police, was a shrewd judge of men. Writing of Napoleon's fitness as a ruler, he says:

"I was sincerely attached to that man, being fully convinced that there was no one in the career of arms and in the civil order who possessed a character so firm, so persevering—such a character, in short, as was requisite to direct the government and suppress factions."

Bonaparte's sudden return from Egypt to Paris to place himself at the head of government brings out this analogy from Fouche:

"There would have been no great merit in coming to take possession of an immense power which was offered to the most enterprising and of gathering the fruits of an enterprise in which, to succeed, the display of audacity was alone requisite; but to abandon a victorious army, to pass through hostile fleets, to arrive in the very nick of time, hold all parties in suspense and decide for the safest, to weigh, balance and master everything in the midst of so many contrary interests and opposing passions, and all this in twenty-five days, supposes wonderful ability, a firm character and prompt decision."

"Gentlemen, you have a master," was the verdict of Napoleon's chief rival, Sieyès, upon hearing the cry from the battlements, "treat upon the finances, the administration, the laws, the army, politics in general, and discuss the various subjects with ability."

"I will not," he declared "upon after his installation—I will not govern with the weakness of a debilitated chief." Ten years later, when involved in wars abroad and beset with cabals at home, "this extraordinary man," says Fouche, "had not yet lost any of his warlike vigor. His courage and his genius raised him above all his errors."

Mme. de Remusat also calls attention to Napoleon's quick mastery of the larger principles of government. She says:

"The ministerial councils were held on fixed days. There were three state councils a week. For five or six years the emperor frequently presided over them. He frequently astonished his hearers by observations full of lumithose who do not love France do not love me, and those who speak ill of my people, I hold them for my bitterest enemies."

"Your majesty will find a brother in me if I find a Frenchman in you. If you forget the feelings which attach you to our common country, you will not think it wrong that I should forget the ties which nature has placed between us."

Monseigneur, who accompanied Napoleon in the capacity of secretary, says that after inspecting a large factory at Joux he took the crown of the Legion of Honor from his buttonhole and handed it to the manufacturer, saying:

"Here is my cross. I like to reward services of all kinds to the motherland. Peaceful war made against the enemy in your workshop is no less efficacious than the war waged on battlefields."

To one of his ministers he wrote from the battlefield: "As a general rule, the best way to praise me is to do things which may inspire the nation, the young and the army with heroic feelings."

Napoleon's liberal treatment of vanquished foes is frequently depicted in the annals of his reign, not merely as a phase of gallantry to be expected in a warrior, but as a shining trait in his character. Conspirators who sought his ruin and even his lifeblood and traitors who betrayed his cause were forgiven. Says De Bausset, prefect of the palace, "Once the first feeling of annoyance over, Napoleon always pardoned."

"All that I know of him proves that he possesses a great soul, which quickly forgets injuries," wrote the Duchesse d'Angoulême. In this vein she recalls the words of Napoleon to a minister who handed him the names of a dozen powerful conspirators that had been detected in the work, with the query, "What does your majesty command with respect to this affair?"

"Nothing!" The other looked at him with astonishment and again offered his list, but the emperor smiled and repeated: "Nothing at all, my dear count. I punish my enemies only when their machinations interfere with my projects for the good of my people. It is for that, not because they oppose me, that I punish them. I am less of a Corsican than I am thought."

In the island of Elba, speaking of his possible return to France, the emperor abandoned and already betrayed by his best friends, exclaimed:

"I will punish nobody! I wish to forget everything!"

And when, on his return to the Tuileries on March 20, 1815, he received at once and the same time documents signed by these same prefects and officials declaring their adhesion to the restored imperial regime and assurances of fidelity addressed to Louis XVIII., who had taken to flight, the emperor, filled with pity for these ungrateful men, whom he had formerly loaded with favors, contented himself with shrugging his shoulders and saying:

"Just like mankind. One must laugh at them to keep from crying."

And, sullying his action to his words, he replaced about his person the majority of the chamberlains, equerries and masters of ceremonies who had surrounded him in 1814.

Dwelling upon this phase of human character one day at St. Helena, Napoleon said:

"Let me tell you that a man, he who has the true feelings of a man, never cherishes hatred. His anger or ill humor never goes beyond the irritation of the moment, the electrical stroke. He who is formed to discharge high duties and to exercise authority never considers persons. His views are directed to things, their weight and consequence."

Upon this principle he had acted of ten during his troubled reign. Mme. de Remusat quotes these words, spoken when face to face with a notorious conspiracy:

"I have no feelings of hatred. I am not capable of acting from revenge. I only sweep obstacles from my path, and, if it were expedient, you should see me pardon Georges Cadoudal tomorrow, although he came simply and solely to assassinate me."

Bourbignon gives a notable instance of Napoleon's moderation in the flush of his victory at Marengo. The defeated Austrian general sent an intermediary to plead with the conqueror for better terms. "Sir," said Napoleon, "carry my final determination to your general. It is irrevocable. I occupy your whole rear. Your finest troops are killed and wounded. I might insist on harder conditions, but I moderate my demands in consideration of the gray hairs of your general."

USE OF VOICE AND MUSIC

Chicago Woman Describes Their Value to Mankind.

NATURE SHOWN BY THE TONES.

Mrs. Clyde Pence Tells How to Know a Man's Character by Listening to His Voice—Made a Tonic for the Sick, Especially Those Mentally Affected—Essential to War.

"Character reading" became out of date in Millard avenue, Chicago, the other day, from now on "character hearing" will be the vogue, says the Chicago Tribune. At the meeting of the Women's Literary club of Millard avenue, held in the afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles D. Currier, the president, Mrs. Clyde Pence, told her fellow members how to "hear" a man's character in his voice. She gave the following rules:

Those who have a deep, sonorous voice, like that of a donkey, are indiscreet and quarrelsome.

Those having a sharp, thin, husky voice are weak and yield easily to temptations.

A full, abrupt voice denotes a strong, impulsive, bold, enterprising man.

A powerful, deep voice generally indicates cowardice.

The man possessing a voice which is deep at first, but raised to a high key as he finishes speaking is noisy, irritable and of unhappy disposition.

Those having a thin, shrill voice are peevish, ill tempered and passionate.

A low, sweet voice is an "admirable thing in woman."

The speaker's subject was "The Influence of Music on Health and Life." She said that music is prescribed as a good tonic for the sick.

"It is successfully employed in our insane asylums," she said, "for and, depression or despondency. It performs wonders in cases of longing for new excitement, cheering all who suffer from low spirits. If we would apply music to the treatment or relief of disease we must necessarily be acquainted with the patient's manner of life, his character, temperament, habits and passions. If the patient is a morose, avowedly likely to keep his mind in the condition into which he has fallen."

Mrs. Pence then prescribed the following kinds of music for use in the different cases described:

Lively and vigorous music for a delicate, weak and nervous child.

Those of a dull, sluggish nature should be gradually roused by means of powerful and impressive music.

Those of a nervous disposition must be soothed by sweet and tender melodies.

Those of a bilious temperament should hear songs that are light, short and tinged with gaiety.

"Even those not ill," continued Mrs. Pence, "will find music useful in strengthening mental energy and ideas, in refreshing the imagination and relieving fatigue."

The speaker urged that music is essential to war.

"An army," she said, "would be soon tired of having its gaudy and noisy music as its harp. I believe that the music more than the cause during our war with Spain made the flower of manhood of our nation fall into line and go down to Cuba to combat not only the Spaniards, but the fever."

Mrs. Pence declared that the influence of music on animals is as potent as upon human beings.

"The passions of animals, like those of human beings," she said, "have naturally rhythmic character, to be dependent of all education and customs. Tenderness, jealousy, glee, gaiety, merriment and rage sometimes can be aroused and again calmed by songs, especially if the songs are simple and the phrases which compose them are short and easily comprehended."

Then the club tested the power of music. The club chorus sang a number of selections, and Mrs. Edward Tibbitts sang a lullaby.
